The ads, created with O'Keefe Reinhard & Paul, appeal to forgetful shoppers and remind them that Groupon has experiences for everyone on their list. And with instant gifting, they can finish up their shopping and go back to a restful night's sleep. According to the National Retail Federation, only one in 10 Americans complete their holiday shopping by mid-December with indecisiveness over what to buy ranking as the number one cause.

“This campaign celebrates what sets us apart from all other holiday shopping destinations—the ability to instantly gift amazing local experiences from small businesses in your community,” said Jon Wild, vice president of North America marketing, Groupon. “We have the distinctive ability to be the idea last-minute gifting source for shoppers with our wide variety of activities, restaurants, beauty services and more. Plus, we provide a seamless savings experience for the gift-giver.”

The last-minute gifting campaign continues

Groupon's use of celebratory musical storytelling with lyrics set to up-tempo polka tunes. The ads, running on television, online video and radio through Christmas, are an extension of Groupon's broader holiday campaign that launched in early November.

“We have built a unique voice for the Groupon brand that is instantly recognizable with its use of orchestral music and operatic rhyme,” explained Matt Reinhard, Chief Creative Officer at OKRP. “This year we saw an opportunity to leverage our musical storytelling to promote Groupon's deep local offerings as the perfect antidote to the last minute gifter while also celebrating the great deals they offer.”

Groupon has built one of the largest local marketplaces of its kind offering a wide range of local goods, services and experiences to consumers while helping small local businesses grow. A recent Groupon survey on consumer shopping preferences which revealed that more than two-thirds of shoppers prefer to shop locally.

All Groupon holiday spots can be found via the Groupon YouTube channel. Blackwood Seven is handling the media buy for the campaign.
