Its consumer-facing applications, ParkWhiz and BestParking, provide the fastest and most efficient way for drivers to find and book parking spaces before reaching their destination. ParkWhiz delivers integrated parking data and transactional solutions to millions of consumers, mobile devices and connected vehicles through partners like Ford, Ticketmaster, Stubhub and many more. ParkWhiz has helped more than 6 million drivers seamlessly get where they need to be. For more information, visit ParkWhiz.com.

"We want to make it as easy as possible for people to explore the amazing local businesses in their communities," said Jennifer Carr-Smith, senior vice president of North American Local, Groupon. "Offering convenient parking is an important step towards our vision of building the daily habit in local."

ParkWhiz—the leading provider of scalable, on-demand parking services to both consumers and enterprise customers—has thousands of locations across the United States. The company's mobile apps and website make parking simpler for drivers looking to reserve parking spaces before reaching their destinations.

"We're thrilled that our on-demand parking inventory is now available to tens of millions of Groupon customers through the Groupon App," said Jeff Judge, Chief Technology Officer, ParkWhiz. "We believe that parking isn't the final destination—it's a bridge to the experiences people are most excited about. We're streamlining the process of buying on mobile so Groupon customers can handle their parking needs at the same time as they are saving on experiences in their city."

The two Chicago-based companies began piloting their new partnership in late 2017.
